

BROKE THE RECORD.

A Nickel-Steel Ingot of Fifty Tons Cast at Homestead.

THE TEST IS VERY SUCCESSFUL.

A Naval Officer Present Praises the Work in the Highest Terms--Even Bigger Tests to be Attempted in the Future at the Works.

Pittsburg, Pa., Dec. 20.—Friday afternoon there was cast in the open hearth department of the Homestead steel works of Carnegie, Phipps & Co., a nickel-steel ingot weighing over 50 tons. This, without a doubt, is the largest nickel-steel ingot yet cast in the United States, its dimensions being 40 inches thick, 60 inches wide and 180 inches long.

It required two "heats," or, in other words, the contents of two melting furnaces to make the cast. The ingot was cast in what is known as a sand mold of a unique design and used exclusively by the Carnegies. It is claimed that with the sand mold cast much better results are obtained, and armor plates rolled from steel, cast in a sand mold, have shown up well in the tests recently made. The casting of the 50-ton ingot was an event in the history of the works, but it is a mere handful compared to a series of ingots to be cast in the near future, the lightness of which will be 100 tons.

THE TEST AN ENTIRE SUCCESS.

The casting of the fifty-ton ingot was a success from start to finish, there being neither a hitch nor a break of any kind. And to give the reader an idea of the systematic methods and perfect discipline practiced in the Homestead steel works, it is well to say that not a word was spoken during the time occupied in casting this monstrous chunk of metal. Everything being in readiness, the forty-ton ladle was swung under the spout that connects with the top hole of the furnace and a wave of the hand from the general manager, and the tapping hole is closed; another wave of the hand and several of the furnace crew fall upon a long rod and with great vigor ram it home through the tapping hole, when there is a glow, then a swish and a spatter, and finally the pure white metal comes with a steady, even flow, filling the ladle almost to overflowing.

The ladle was then raised by the hydraulic crane, placed on a boggy, and a puffing, sneezing, wheezing little dinky engine whisks it away to the casting pit, where the ladle was snatched up and swung around to the mold and the molten metal run into it.

FOUND TO BE A PERFECT INGOT.

But as the contents of one furnace were not sufficient to make the cast, it was necessary to tap another. All this had been anticipated, and the operation above described was again repeated. The ingot was stripped yesterday and found to be perfect. A most interesting operation in connection with the ingot was the shearing of its ends yesterday under the great hydraulic press. The press, which is used for bending and shaping the armor plates, was fitted with great steel blades and the ends of the ingot, one at a time, were run between them, and the power being applied, the monster blade descended and cut its way clean through the forty inches of tough, unyielding mass just as easily as if it had been old cheese.

One of the naval officers that witnessed the casting of the ingot said: "The discipline, skill and precision exercised in the open hearth department during the casting could not be equaled by the crew of a man-of-war."

THE GRIP'S RAVAGES.

It Comes Every Twenty Years and Lasts Three or Four Years.

VIENNA, Dec. 20.—The alarming spread of the influenza and the extraordinary mortality that follows its ravages gives especial significance and interest to a lecture delivered yesterday at the University by Prof. Nothnagel, the court physician. Dr. Nothnagel traces the origin of the disease as far back as the ninth century, history showing that it recurs three or four years with varying intensity and then dies out for a period of twenty or more years.

The professor expressed the belief, based on experience, that those who have once had the disease are not proof against subsequent attacks, although less liable to infection. The learned gentleman knows of no remedy for it, in spite of all the assertions to the contrary. The disease still remains a puzzle to the doctors.

There are three kinds of influenza, added Prof. Nothnagel—nervous, gastric and catarrhal. There are also two kinds of diseases that follow—bronchial pneumonia, which is less dangerous than the genuine influenza, and pneumonia, which usually attacks the heart. The professor was emphatic in warning his hearers against the use of anti-pyrene and anti-febrine. As pneumonia influenza usually affects the cardiac muscles, it is desirable to employ such stimulants as digitalis, wine, cognac, with subcutaneous injections of camphor and, in some cases, baths.

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen: I have been in the general practice of medicine for most forty years, and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times, and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions. Yours truly,

L. L. Gonsch, M. D., Office, 215 Summit street.

We will give $100 for any case of Catarrh that can not be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally.

MR. DELBRUGGE'S CAS

As Viewed by a Well-Known Clergyman. An Incident in Dayton.

Sir:—I was sorry to read in the INTELLIGENCER last Thursday that the chief of police in Wheeling had again forgotten what belonged to the dignity of his office—to say nothing of what belonged to himself and family—had broken his pledge made some time since and again fallen into public disgrace. It is a sad thing when any man thus barters away his reputation and his manhood. But it is more lamentable when the one who does it occupies a conspicuous place of responsibility.

Whether wise or unwise to have granted the chief this chance for trial, I was exceedingly glad that it was done, for I earnestly hoped that the peril which threatened would prove to be a motive strong enough to turn him aside from the too frequent path of evil and so produce genuine reform.

I had known for many months, as had others, that beyond all reasonable question, the chief was in sympathy with some of those places whose open doors are the gateway to certain ruin. But he was a kind hearted man, too kind perhaps to be just, and this made it difficult, if not impossible, for him to perform honestly the duties of his responsible office.

I have been very glad that the INTELLIGENCER, while demanding the acceptance of his resignation, has done it in a spirit of great kindness. It is hardly possible to err by going too far in that direction. There are times when men in public places feel compelled to speak in defence of the public good, and in so doing are obliged to condemn those who are in the wrong. But this should always be done in a way which will show that it is not prompted by hostility to the offender, but by a sense of duty for the protection of society and the maintenance of that which is right.

It will be well if this sad occurrence shall serve to quicken the sense of the community, and specially of those who are in positions where they may be expected to stand as guardians of the morals of the community, to consider well the danger of leaving undisturbed the scores of places where not only public officials are exposed to ruin, but where young men of less experience and less strength are exposed to the most powerful and hence the most dangerous of all temptations.

And does not the safety of community demand that every city official, no matter how exalted his place, shall, for the sake of example if for nothing else, keep himself free from complicity with all such places of moral pollution, and all such characters as find rendezvous in such places or affiliate with them, or else at once and forever abandon his position, and give place to some one who is worthy of the trust?

With sincere sympathy for the erring, and continual solicitude for those who are on every side exposed to the seductive ways which lead to destruction, every word of the above has been written. CHAS. W. CUSHING.

Dayton, O., Dec. 19, 1891.

P. S.—An incident occurred here a few days since, which it is a little singular that the Dayton Journal and some other papers, I think, have made no allusion to, not even so much as one line.

The Rev. Mr. Leyden, an evangelist, a converted Catholic priest, who has been lecturing to large audiences in Cleveland and other cities, and who comes well endorsed, it is said, was announced to give four lectures in Dayton, beginning last Sunday afternoon. The first lecture was to be upon the "Roman Catholics and the Common Schools." In the evening he was to give his reasons for leaving the Roman Catholic church. The lectures were to be at the Grand Opera House.

When the people gathered Sunday afternoon the opera house was closed. It is said that two Catholic priests went to the manager of the opera house and offered to pay him more money than was to be paid by the lecturer, on condition that the house should be closed.

The lecturer says that he went to the Opera House on Saturday afternoon and found two Catholic priests talking with the manager. One of them said that he knew the lecturer personally, and knew him to be a worthless character. In reply to a question from the manager he said as he knew the man well. At this juncture the lecturer ventured to ask him what he knew about the man, and if he was certain that he knew him. When the priest affirmed again what he had said, the lecturer replied, "I never knew you, and I am the Rev. Mr. Leyden."

The lectures have not yet come off. But the singular thing is that the leading papers have avoided all allusion to it.

Suppose the opposite had occurred, would anything have been said? Is this our boasted free press?

SHOT TO DEATH.

Two Negroes Charged with Murder Killed by a Mob.

LIVE OAK, FLA., Dec. 20.—Just before 12 o'clock last night a mob of about 100 men, some of them disguised and all armed with rifles or revolvers, called on Sheriff Potsdam and overpowered him. They took from him the keys to the county jail and set a guard over him. They then made a rush for the jail, entered it, and took from their cells the two negroes suspected of the murder of young Parramore in the streets of Bradford last week. The prisoners were bound to trees a short distance from the jail, and their bodies riddled with bullets.

A TRAMP LYNCHED

For Attempting to Assault a Young Lady in Arkansas.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., Dec. 20.—News has just reached here of the lynching of an unknown tramp at Emmett, Nevada county, Tuesday night for attempting a criminal assault upon Miss Bettie McGough. The latter, who is a school teacher, was returning home from school, and while passing through a lonely place the tramp made an attack upon her, but Miss McGough screamed and her screams brought assistance and the tramp fled. He was captured a few hours later and on being identified was strung up.

Christmas in the Churches—Now Glassesware—Personal and General.

The Buckeye Glass company is outdoing itself in new lines for the spring trade. There are several new lines, all of which are decidedly handsome. In lamps, on which the Buckeye has led its competitors, a number of new lines are shown. One of the new departments is in fine decorated shades, made in rose blue and a new color of blue. In these colors a line of electrical supplies are made, also jugs, sets and so on. A full line of novelties are made in ruby etched. New things have been added to the endless assortment of bar goods, stem wares, etc., for which this establishment enjoys such a large trade. Experiments are in progress for other new things. The spring line will be the largest ever shown.

At the M. E. church there will be a treat on Christmas morning. At the Presbyterian there will be an entertainment on Christmas eve. At the U. Mrs. George Anderson, a well known and highly respected lady of Martin's Ferry, died at the family residence on West Hanover street Saturday night at 12 o'clock, after a lingering illness. She was a member of the M. E. church, and was the mother of Mrs. G. A. Greenfield. The remains will be taken to Loydsville at 7 o'clock to-morrow morning for interment.

At a meeting of the Belmont Oil Company on Saturday it was decided not to bore the well any deeper at present owing to the way it is producing, and the drillers were each presented with a suit of clothes for beating the record in drilling the well.

Mr. George Brashers, a splendid young man of Martin's Ferry, and by trade a tinner, in the employ of Mr. August Koehrsen, was married yesterday to Miss Gertrude Cochran, daughter of Mrs. William Duff, at the family residence west of the city.

One hundred and ten dollars a front foot is what August Koehrsen paid Alvin Parker for a lot on Fourth street between Hanover and Walnut, and there are very few business houses on the street.

Fewer presents have been sent from Martin's Ferry this year than in former years, and the holiday trade, for some unaccountable reason, is rather quiet.

Mr. and Mrs. John Martin, of Steubenville, are visiting Mrs. Martin's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Parker Elliott, both of whom are on the sick list.

The department was called out on Saturday afternoon by a chimney fire in the residence of George Blinco, in Clark's addition.

I HAVE been a sufferer from catarrh for years. Having tried a number of remedies advertised as "sure cures" without obtaining any relief, I had resolved never to take any other patent medicines, when a friend advised me to try Ely's Cream Balm. I did so with great reluctance, but can now testify that after using it for six weeks I believe myself cured. It is a most agreeable remedy—an invaluable Balm.—Joseph Stewart, 624 Grand Avenue, Brooklyn.

A Preventive for Croup.

We want every mother to know that croup can be prevented. True croup never appears without a warning. The first symptom is hoarseness; then the child appears to have taken cold or a cold may have accompanied the hoarseness from the start. After that a peculiar rough cough is developed, which is followed by the croup. The time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse; a few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will prevent the attack. Even after a rough cough has appeared the disease may be prevented by using this remedy as directed. It has never been known to fail. 25 cent, 50 cent and $1 bottles for sale by druggists. NAW
